I've bought at least 20 reloading manuals over the years. I gave most of them away recently in my effort to unclutter my reloading area. Currently I use the newest edition of Nosler & Hornady books for basic info/data. Because new cartridges, bullets and powders are released so frequently, books are rapidly becoming outmoded.

A full size hand held reloading press, yet the tool weighs only 1-1/2 lbs and costs so little; reloaders will want more than one. No matter how much reloading equipment a reloader has, it is a really great idea to have a portable hand press. No time is wasted mounting a tool to a work bench. When finished reloading, just pack it all away.
